NO BLAME IN BRIDGE CRASH.

Jury Finds Broken Casting Caused Collapse of Span at Quebec.

Quebec, Sept. 23.—A verdict of accidental death was returned by the coroner's jury here today at the inquest into the loss of thirteen lives by the collapse of the central span of the Quebec Bridge September 11. The question of responsibility and the reliability of the construction methods used in the attempt to hoist the span into place were not considered in the findings, although testimony was taken showing that the immediate cause of the disaster was the breaking of the southwest supporting casting.

Expert testimony was given showing that the hoisting jacks were not responsible and the span did not buckle until tilted and strained. The same methods of elevating the span, it was testified by experts, probably would be used when a new link is put in place.

GIVES AWAY ESTATE TO KEEP HEIRS QUIET

St. Louis Woman Will Not Let Relatives "Fuss" Over Property.

Special to The Washington Herald.

St. Louis, Sept. 23.—Mrs. Hannah Dur-yea, 80-year-old widow, who has just died to St. Louis University property at Sixteenth and Poplar streets, declares that as she cannot take her property with her and does not want her heirs to "fuss over it" after she is gone, she is going to give it all away before she dies. She has succeeded so far in giving away all her five acres of her 10-acre estate at Jennings, on which she lives in two rooms.

The property given to the university, she says, has a frontage of 77 feet and is worth $1,000 a foot. She says she gave it for the purpose of having a hospital for convalescents built.

President Otting of the university, said the frontage was 521-2 feet and that the income from the two-story building would be used to help deserving poor at hospitals and clinics.

PRODUCERS TO WORK FOR CENTRAL DAIRY

Will Raise $10,000 to Push Project Through Congress.

Washington is in no immediate danger of curtailment of its milk supply, nor is it likely that there will be any change in the method of distribution until plans may be formulated and executed whereby the milk producers of this vicinity can organize a central and co-operative dairy in this city. This was the general result of the meeting of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association at the Raleigh Hotel yesterday.

Although the association in its meeting yesterday favored the establishment of a municipal dairy, a number of the members after the meeting decided that should the District government condemn this scheme, the producers' association would establish a co-operative plant in the city, to be used as the clearing house for their product.

More than 500 producers were present at the meeting yesterday, which was called for the purpose of hearing the report of a committee appointed at the last meeting to confer with local dealers in an effort to obtain a higher price for milk sold by producers without affecting the ultimate price of the article.

W. A. Simpson, a prominent local milk dealer, said last night, in speaking of the result of the meeting, that there is no doubt that a central co-operative body, such as had been proposed, could eliminate a good bit of the overhead expense incidental to the delivery of milk, but that to establish such a dairy, the producers would first have to take over the investments of those who are already dealers.

"At the present prices," says Mr. Simpson, "producers are making a fair profit." The opinion of the committee, as reported yesterday, states that the milk business at present is most mismanaged and most inefficiently conducted. It is with this belief that the committee suggested the central dairy which could standardize the milk and its delivery.

"At this time," continued the report, "a milk strike would result most disastrously for all concerned, and the only action to be taken by farmers who do not favor the municipal dairy idea, is to discontinue their efforts in the milk industry and devote their time to the production of more profitable articles."

The association agreed yesterday to assess themselves for the expense of an association to further the cause of the municipal dairy, and committees were appointed, according to the political power which the appointee could carry in Congress.

It is estimated that a fund of $10,000 will be raised to finance the fight which will be made to obtain the municipal plant, which sum will be contributed by the members of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association.

SUFFRAGISTS ATTACK CONSCRIPTION PLAN

Congressional Union Paper Assails Clause in Hay Army Bill.

A "jockey" clause, authorizing the President to resort to conscription of the "un-organized militia," which has been discovered tucked away in the Hay army bill, is pointed to as a "startling change in our military regulations," in the leading editorial in yesterday's issue of The Suffragist, official organ of the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage and the Woman's party.

"This important innovation in American military service methods is of such vital significance to the home life of the people of the United States," says The Suffragist, "that it should have been made before the women of the country as a whole have had an opportunity to express their will in the matter."

"To authorize, in time of profound peace, compulsory military service, and to give the President the power to call into a standing power to conscript, is an unheard-of innovation," says the editorial. The conscription clause reads:

"If for any reason there shall not be enough volunteer enlistments to keep the reserve battalions at the proper strength, a sufficient number of the un-organized militia shall be called into the service of the United States to maintain each of such battalions at the proper strength."

"The other night the pet bear at the city zoo escaped. Immediately after the bear's escape the keeper telephoned to the police precinct to send a patrolman to help him catch him."

"All right, Trouble," called out Sgt. Stribling to Patrolman Tribble, who jumped hastily from his seat and started out "gatekeeper" at the park, wanting you to help him catch a bear."

"A what did you say?" questioned Tribble. "I don't object to arresting folks, but when it comes to bears you just count me out."

"Well, if you're too scared to go Bill Mosley will," replied the sergeant. But Mosley balked, too.

MYSTERIOUS FLY MAY CARRY PLAGUE GERMS

Special to The Washington Herald.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 23.—Research physicians at the Academy of Natural Sciences are conducting an experiment in which the subject is a mysterious fly, hoping to discover whether this fly is one of the carriers of infantile paralysis germs.

According to attaches of the Academy, this fly has never been found in this section of the country, although evidence of its existence here is said to exist.

The insect, which is said to be about the size of a bee when full grown, is said to make an incision in the skin of rabbits and there lay its eggs. After the eggs are hatched the young insect is said to bore its way through the skin of the rabbit to the air.

Bohemian brewers have perfected a process that matures beer and makes it ready for use in from eight to twelve days instead of the usual three months.

THE REMODELED GOWN

The purpose of this department is to help you with your remodeling problem. I will be glad to answer questions or to supply ideas for your individual requirements. A description of the color and style of your old gown, together with a description of your figure and coloring, will enable me to reply to your questions more intelligently and in greater detail. Address Gertrude Beresford, care of this paper, and inclose a stamped addressed envelope for a direct and prompt reply.

Whether to invest in an expensive suit or whether to buy a topcoat-fur or fur-trimmed-to wear with one-piece dresses, is a problem confronting many of us at present. The good-looking topcoats offer the advantage of warmth when out of doors and the charm of more of a variety indoors when worn with several dresses. Serge and softly woven cloth in a variety of weaves again the best choice for these gowns. A one-piece frock is more dressy than a waist and skirt. Many women lean to this solution of the dress problem.

Dress of Seal Brown Serge.

Seal brown serge and sand-colored gabardine furnish the combination of materials for this gown. Even if you do not follow this model exactly it will undoubtedly suggest possibilities for freshening up a cloth frock, with perhaps the new addition of cape, collar, cuffs and pockets. A whole chapter might be written on pockets. No longer need we envy the men this feature of their clothes. Some of the new pockets appear as commodious as trunks. However, convenience is not the end for which they were created—rather are they the means of introducing novelties in embroidery of wool thread or beads. I have cut this skirt in two sections, upper and lower; in case you have to piece your material with brown, taffeta or charmeuse.

To cut these exaggerated pockets take a piece of material which reaches from waist to finger tips and from front to back about ten inches. Fold this in half and cut out a deep U, leaving six inches in depth in the center of the U. Four rows of fancy soutache in seal brown outlined on the front and cuffs of the bodice. The front is turned up like a bib and shaped to follow the lines of the collar. It is finished with a cording of the goods. Six tarnished gilt buttons of antique design furnish an attractive touch. If you have an olive green dress on hand, collar and cuffs of deep ecru embroidered in green with a bit of terra cotta will be good. Navy blue with sand-colored trimmings worked in blue is a contrast which never fails to be satisfactory.

Blue Serge with Purple Trimmings.

The other gown is a blue serge with cape, cuffs and pocket flap of dark royal purple faille. Here also the upper portion of the skirt may be made of silk. A box pleat runs down the front of the skirt, on either side of which triangular pockets are set. These pockets are faced on the right side with purple faille. The back of the skirt also carries a box pleat.

On the waist a piece of serge is stitched on either side of the front to form a long-waisted basque, which closes with three silver buttons. The small revers are of serge. The high cape collar of purple tulle, back over a little vest of purple silk, the back of the waist does not extend below the normal waistline. If necessary, it may be pieced by setting on a shaped section running into a point between the shoulders. These sections may be corded or sewed flat with a double row of tailor stitching. The cuffs are made double, of purple silk, and roll loosely back from the hand.

MAON'S "FINEST" BALK AT ARRESTING BEAR

Special to The Washington Herald.

Macon, Ga., Sept. 23.—Patrolmen Mosley and Tribble earn their daily bread by arresting violators of the city's laws.

The other night the pet bear at the city zoo escaped. Immediately after the bear's escape the keeper telephoned to the police precinct to send a patrolman to help him catch him.

"All right, Trouble," called out Sgt. Stribling to Patrolman Tribble, who jumped hastily from his seat and started out "gatekeeper" at the park, wanting you to help him catch a bear."

"A what did you say?" questioned Tribble. "I don't object to arresting folks, but when it comes to bears you just count me out."

BOARD WILL EXAMINE ALL MACHINE GUNS

Right on top of the controversy between Brig. Gen. William Crozier, chief of ordnance, and Col. Isaac N. Lewis, retired, over nonadoption by the army of the Lewis machine gun, Secretary of War Baker announced yesterday afternoon that he would soon name a board to test all available machine guns. Secretary Baker said this decision was made before the recent charges were made by Col. Lewis that his gun, which is now used by the British army, had never been given a fair test by this government, though he offered the use of his patent to the army free of charge.
